

GE Wind Turbines:

Build Better in Schenectady

Workers at GE Schenectady are ready to build wind turbines – to power the green economy, and to ensure a future for our factory and our community for generations to come. GE Schenectady is the home of power – the “Electric City” that powers our country.

But over the years, we have seen our work dwindle. A once thriving GE campus of over 30,000 workers, is now less than 1,000 today. Through the years our jobs have been shipped overseas – most recently to Poland.

We built the generators for the first electrical revolution. We can be the foundation of the renewable renaissance, continuing with the old while we secure our future with the new.

Factory jobs power our economy – and growing GE jobs in Schenectady will boost our entire community and upstate New York. For every 100 good factory jobs, our community will gain another 150 jobs and $3 million will be injected annually into the local economy.

We are ready to build it here in Schenectady - we have the land, access to transportation and the skilled workforce. Let's bring wind turbine jobs to GE Schenectady.
